

From Crisis to Coordination: What have we learned from the Evaluation of the Collective Service?

Are you curious about the role of risk communication and community engagement in public health emergencies and why it is important for organizations to work together in this area?

Join us for a webinar packed with insights from a joint evaluation of the Collective Service, a pioneering partnership between the IFRC, UNICEF and WHO. We will discuss how this collaboration has impacted public health coordination, its challenges and achievements, and strategic recommendations for the future.

This webinar is offered twice to accommodate different time zones, so please sign up using one of the links below to reserve your spot. The webinar will be held in English, but a French translation will be available.
